

William T. Reynolds, Jr., MPAS, PA-C, DFAAPA
First Vice Speaker

William (Bill) T. Reynolds is serving his sixth term on the AAPA Board of Directors. Reynolds' service on the Board builds on his 15 years of leadership experience within the AAPA House of Delegates, where he previously served as second vice speaker, and chaired numerous House Reference Committees and the Standing Rules committee.

Based in Dallas, Pa., Reynolds is the clinical director and an associate clinical professor in the Department of Physician Assistant Studies at King's College. While he loves teaching, Reynolds is equally committed to ensuring quality, affordable healthcare in small and rural communities. First employed by the Rural Health Corporation of Northeastern Pennsylvania, he has remained committed to the organization for more than 20 years. He continues to practice in general pediatrics and family medicine with the organization on a part-time basis.

Supporting future leaders and community service is a reoccurring theme for Reynolds, who served as an Assistant Scout Master for eight years and is a recent recipient of the Eagle Scout Mentor Pin from one of his Scouts. He knows firsthand the difference such an influence creates. He credits his own success as an AAPA leader to a colleague who encouraged him to become engaged with the Pennsylvania Society of PAs (PSPA) and the AAPA House of Delegates in the early stages of his career.

Reynolds earned his bachelor's degree from the PA program at King's College and is a graduate of the University of Nebraska's PA master's degree program, where he specialized in family practice. He has earned the designation of AAPA Distinguished Fellow.
